When Irish teams meet Anchormen/women—

There'll be a Lynch mob on the court

by Arline Aissis Fleming

When the Irish Men's and Women's National Basketball Teams come to Rhode Island College on Nov. 9, there will be a Lynch mob on the basketball court—and maybe one in the stands.

John Lynch of Rhode Island College's men's basketball team will meet his older brother, Billy, of the Irish team at the 9 p.m. tap-off. Their younger sister, Peggy, is a member of RIC's women's basketball team which will play the Irish women's team that same night at 7.

Meanwhile, in the stands, Mother and Dad Lynch and the four other Lynch kids will be trying to figure out what side they want to root for.

Dad's Already Decided

Dad—better known as Dennis Lynch, former mayor of Pawtucket—says he's already decided that he'd better root for the kids closest to this side of the Atlantic. Especially since they are still living at home. But it's not yet clear how the rest of the family will divide up their loyalties.

The Lynch family may be the most vocal audience members there, but they are for sure not the only Rhode Islanders involved in this contest between the American and Irish teams.

Of the six Americans on the Irish team, four have Rhode Island roots.

Steven O'Neill of South Kingstown, (son of John C. O'Neill, director of RIC's Bureau of Grants and Sponsored Projects), will be part of the all-star team coming to the States, in addition to the aforementioned Billy Lynch. Two former members of Brown University's basketball squad, Rob Crichton and Scott McCarthy, will also be playing.

It's a Natural For Us

Additionally, more than 50 Rhode Islanders have been part of the committee which has been planning this event for the past six months, including the elder Lynch. At RIC, the groundwork has been put in place by William M. Baird, athletic director, who says "with all the tie-ins, it's a natural for us." This is the first time that RIC has hosted a match of this type, Baird said.

The Irish National Teams will visit the U.S. on a 10-game schedule, all of which has been arranged by the Irish American Basketball Foundation in Hartford, Conn. to raise money "to support the continued growth and development of the sport of basketball in Ireland."

According to Daniel E. Doyle, Jr., formerly an assistant basketball coach at Brown University and now the executive director of this foundation, basketball in Ireland "has mushroomed over the past five to eight years. The level of basketball has improved dramatically to the point of being comparable with American small colleges," he said.

Matched Against Brother

When Lynch suits up on Nov. 9, he'll be matched up against his younger brother, John, a sophomore transfer from Clarke who is playing ball at RIC for the first time. Sister Peggy, the youngest of the Lynch daughters, is a sophomore who was also a RIC team member as a freshman.

Rhode Island native Steve O'Neill has played in Ireland for the past two seasons and is ranked among the country's best players. Billy Lynch is experiencing his first season in Ireland, having just graduated from Suffolk Law School. Both athletes played basketball in Rhode Island high schools, O'Neill at South Kingstown and Lynch at St. Raphael's.

The first team to tour Ireland was from Rhode Island," he said, adding that the 16-member team coming here on Nov. 9 boasts four players with Rhode Island roots out of the six Americans.

Rhode Island native Steve O'Neill has played in Ireland for the past two seasons and is ranked among the country's best players. Billy Lynch is experiencing his first season in Ireland, having just graduated from Suffolk Law School. Both athletes played basketball in Rhode Island high schools, O'Neill at South Kingstown and Lynch at St. Raphael's.

Tickets to the Nov. 9 fundraiser are $4 for adults and $2 for students and will be available at the door.
The Office of Human Development Services announces that fiscal 1983 closing dates of a majority of its grant programs in early November.

The National Science Foundation announces the competition for grants in 41 priority areas supporting research, development, and education.

A. Trained grants for social service programs.

Keep in touch with the Bureau for Development Services.

The National Endowment for the Humanities has established a deadline for the receipt of full proposals under the Humanities: Youth Grants Program.

A final deadline for the national competitions for grants to support programs in early childhood education.

Margaret Quincyino, Burgundy Bank Research Center.

The deadline is Dec. 1.

This Special Project grant applications will be reviewed by the National Endowment on the Arts up to Dec. 15.

Projects should demonstrate the value of the artist and the artistic educational projects. They should have a local, state, regional, or national focus; be documentable; and replaceable. Grants will generally not exceed $15,000.

For information on these and other projects, please contact John O'Neill at the Bureau of Grants and Sponsored Projects ext. 239.

N.B.--The deadline for the previously announced Scholarships for Students of Programs is Nov. 9. The deadline for the Comprehensive Program is Nov. 30.

Grant deadlines announced

Workshop on sexual assault program for Dec. 16 & 17

Two one-day workshops on sexual assault, motivated by the recent death of John Paul Inglesi, will be held at Rhode Island College from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 16 and 17.

Neuf has also established Dec. 1 as the deadline for its Consultancy Grant Program. This provides the services of a consultant to an academic department.

What's News

Dr. Victor L. Frohlich, professor of political science, lectured on "Lobbying within the American Political System" on Oct. 17 at the Arts and Letters lecture series at the Darwinport-Hitchcock Medical Center in Hanover, N.H. We wish to remind you that we would enjoy hearing from you at the medical center.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to Ava and her husband and family. Address notes to them at: 162 Eliza St., Providence, R.I., 02907.

The passing of Mrs. Idalia Robinson of Providence on Oct. 21, Mrs. Robinson was the mother of Ava Gist of RIC's Student Development Office. Our deepest sympathy is extended to Ava and her husband and family. Address notes to them at: 162 Eliza St., Providence, R.I. 02907.

We were saddened to learn of the unexpected recent death of John Paul Inglesi, a graduate of the RIC Class of '76 and the son of Mrs. Marie Inglesi of the bureau's office.

We extend our sincerest condolences to Mrs. Inglesi and her husband and family. Address notes to them at: 162 Eliza St., Providence, R.I., 02907.

We were saddened also, to hear of the passing of Mrs. Idalia Robinson of Providence on Oct. 21. Mrs. Robinson was the mother of Ava Gist of RIC's Student Development Office. Our deepest sympathy is extended to Ava and her husband and family. Address notes to them at: 162 Eliza St., Providence, R.I., 02907.

The passing of Mrs. Idalia Robinson of Providence on Oct. 21, Mrs. Robinson was the mother of Ava Gist of RIC's Student Development Office. Our deepest sympathy is extended to Ava and her husband and family. Address notes to them at: 162 Eliza St., Providence, R.I., 02907.

The passing of Mrs. Idalia Robinson of Providence on Oct. 21.

The following faculty members will give papers on:

-- Nicholas Grupp - "Nineteenth Century Seaside Resort Patronage; Chester Simonski - "Reduction of the Case Study of the Successful Challenge to Legislative Construction of State Senate Districts in Rhode Island"; Robert Sullivan - "The Historic and Continuing Impact of Industrialization and Water Quality along the Pawcatuck River Basin"; Marion Wright - "The Changing Landscape in China: An Enclave to Place Current Activity in Perspective."

Econ Ed prize winners announced

Three Rhode Island teachers are among 12 teachers nationally who will share in some $11,000 in prizes for their junior-high-school-level economic education projects recently entered in the 20th annual national awards program for the teachers of the economy, according to the Rhode Island Center for Economic Education.

Eloise Boyer and Deborah Anderson, both of Warwick, and Dennis Robbioso of Charlestown, took third place prizes in the awards program which was administered by the Joint Council on Economic Education.

All teachers at Cranston High East, their projects will be submitted for the 20th annual national awards program for the teachers of the economy, according to the Rhode Island Center for Economic Education.

The Oklahoma City Board of Education passed a resolution last week establishing a new program to provide $1 million in scholarships for students who earn at least three of these grants in the past.

The National Science Foundation has announced a new program for the acquisition of computing research equipment. The Computer Science and Computer Engineering Research Equipment Programs provides support for the purchase of equipment for computer-related research. The deadline date is Dec. 1.

Project grants will be reviewed by the National Endowment for the Arts up to Dec. 15.

Projects should demonstrate the value of the art and the artistic educational projects. They should have a local, state, regional, or national focus; be documentable; and replaceable. Grants will generally not exceed $15,000.

For information on these and other projects, please contact John O'Neill at the Bureau of Grants and Sponsored Projects ext. 239.

N.B.--The deadline for the previously announced Scholarships for Students of Programs is Nov. 9. The deadline for the Comprehensive Program is Nov. 30.

A. Nicholas Grupp

He is the author of Men Who Rape: The Psychology of the Offender and the co-author of Sexual Assault of Children and Adolescents.

The program is a three-hour class which provides information on the effects of heart attack, risk factors and rescue.

It is free and open to all, but participants must register by calling the Office of Health Promotion at 456-8061. Attendance is limited.

TheANCHORCharm is a seven-game winning streak was broken from Southeastern Mass. University's George Marcellino scored at the 4:58 mark of the second half from the 18th tee. He ended 1-under for 18 in SMU's favor.

Ric had played in the first half which ended in a tie, but the defense and the offense had their problems in the second half. Ric had played in the first half on the entire game compared to SMU's 18.

The soccer team however, bores an impressiv-ve press of 7-1-4.

It is important that they hang in there, the women's team will play Bryant, East Carolina State, and Bryant, East Carolina State, and Bryant, East Carolina State at the Eastern Regional Championships.

The volleyball team came fourth in the Eastern Connecticut State College Tournament. They defeated Connecticut College, UMass, Rhode Island, and Rhode Island.

For information on these and other programs, contact Cheryl Livneh at 456-8629.

Keeping Score

with Kathy Feldmann

Grant deadlines announced

Workshop on sexual assault program for Dec. 16 & 17

Two one-day workshops on sexual assault, motivated by the recent death of John Paul Inglesi, will be held at Rhode Island College from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 16 and 17.

Neuf has also established Dec. 1 as the deadline for its Consultancy Grant Program. This provides the services of a consultant to an academic department.

The Anchorman's seven-game winning streak was broken from Southeastern Mass. University's George Marcellino scored at the 4:58 mark of the second half from the 18th tee. He ended 1-under for 18 in SMU's favor.

Ric had played in the first half which ended in a tie, but the defense and the offense had their problems in the second half. Ric had played in the first half on the entire game compared to SMU's 18.

The soccer team however, bores an impressiv-ve press of 7-1-4.

It is important that they hang in there, the women's team will play Bryant, East Carolina State, and Bryant, East Carolina State, and Bryant, East Carolina State at the Eastern Regional Championships.

The volleyball team came fourth in the Eastern Connecticut State College Tournament. They defeated Connecticut College, UMass, Rhode Island, and Rhode Island.

For information on these and other programs, contact Cheryl Livneh at 456-8629.
Maria Flook makes—

A welcome debut

by George LaTour

She lives. She observes. She writes. With the eye, mind and heart of a poet, Maria Flook convincingly renders a world of loss, danger, deceptive surfaces and love.

Her poetry has been described as strenuous and demanding of attention “because she does not pull any punches.” She talks about things as they are at full emotional depth. There is nothing pretty, pretty about this 30-year-old part-time instructor of creative writing at Rhode Island College.

Rather, there is a combination of intellectual vigor and gypsy wildness which critic Alan Dugan terms “really invigorating to experience.” Writing poetry since the age of 20, Flook has published works in prestigious national journals such as Poetry, American Poetry Review, and The Antioch Review.

Critic Stanley Kunitz called her poems “electric, absurd, wildly alive and quite contemporary.” Maria Flook convincingly renders a world better.

Poetry Review,

Houghton Mifflin's 10th annual New Response.

"A welcome debut"

Maria Flook makes—

A welcome debut

by George LaTour

She lives. She observes. She writes. With the eye, mind and heart of a poet, Maria Flook convincingly renders a world of loss, danger, deceptive surfaces and love.

Her poetry has been described as strenuous and demanding of attention “because she does not pull any punches.” She talks about things as they are at full emotional depth. There is nothing pretty, pretty about this 30-year-old part-time instructor of creative writing at Rhode Island College.

Rather, there is a combination of intellectual vigor and gypsy wildness which critic Alan Dugan terms “really invigorating to experience.” Writing poetry since the age of 20, Flook has published works in prestigious national journals such as Poetry, American Poetry Review, and The Antioch Review.

Critic Stanley Kunitz called her poems “electric, absurd, wildly alive and quite contemporary.” Maria Flook convincingly renders a world better.

Poetry Review,

Houghton Mifflin's 10th annual New Response.

"A welcome debut"

Maria Flook makes—

A welcome debut

by George LaTour

She lives. She observes. She writes. With the eye, mind and heart of a poet, Maria Flook convincingly renders a world of loss, danger, deceptive surfaces and love.

Her poetry has been described as strenuous and demanding of attention “because she does not pull any punches.” She talks about things as they are at full emotional depth. There is nothing pretty, pretty about this 30-year-old part-time instructor of creative writing at Rhode Island College.

Rather, there is a combination of intellectual vigor and gypsy wildness which critic Alan Dugan terms “really invigorating to experience.” Writing poetry since the age of 20, Flook has published works in prestigious national journals such as Poetry, American Poetry Review, and The Antioch Review.

Critic Stanley Kunitz called her poems “electric, absurd, wildly alive and quite contemporary.” Maria Flook convincingly renders a world better.

Poetry Review,
RIC Theatre to stage O'Neill play

Eugene O'Neill's "A Touch of the Poet" will be staged at Rhode Island College, Nov. 11 to 14, in Roberts Auditorium. The 8 p.m. performance is being directed by assistant professor Elaine Foster Perry. Tickets are $4 for the general public and $2 for students and may be purchased at the door or by reservation. Call the box office at 456-8144.

"A Touch of the Poet" is O'Neill's last complete play. The third play in a projected cycle of plays that was to deal with several New England families, it was published in 1956 and first produced in Sweden. The following year, it was produced in New York, though it was not well received. Several years later, a more successful production was staged starring Helen Hayes.

The four-act drama focuses on how the past determines the fate of these characters. In "A Touch of the Poet," O'Neill dramatizes the contact between a family of Irishmen and a more sedate New England Yankee family.

Barbara Matheson is costume and makeup designer and John Coieter designer of lights and sets. Director Perry was the recipient of the New England Theatre Conference's Moss Hart Award in 1980 for the staging of "To Kill a Mockingbird."

R.I. Federation of Teachers:

Praise RIC

By George LaTour

Rhode Island College's ear must have been buzzing on Oct. 16! People were talking about us and talking in a favorable vein. People who should know. People like the members of the Rhode Island Federation of Teachers.

The day was Saturday. The event was the annual convention of the Rhode Island Federation of Teachers. The site was the Biltmore Plaza in Providence.

Frank Newberry, president of the University of Rhode Island, had the floor and was speaking about the very important role all education must play in the development of high technology-oriented professionals. His comments were not limited to the upgrading of educational programs for high technology professionals, but other careers as well, nurses and teachers among them, the goal being "well rounded" educationally.

After his talk, which was well-received, the floor was open to questions.

It was at this point that a Rhode Island educator (not from RIC) stood up to point out that Rhode Island College has a very fine general education program and, further, went on to ask if URI had anything comparable.

Later on in the question period, at which point the cooperative effort between educators and the "to-be-trained technological" was being discussed, the name of Rhode Island College again came up.

At least one teacher cited RIC as the forerunner in developing an early enrollment program which allows interested high school students to "cut their teeth on entry-level college coursework." The tone of the remarks was highly complimentary.

Faculties, members of the RIC-AFT, and for the convention were impressed that their fellow educators in the federation were obviously impressed with RIC.

There is no question that RIC enjoys a good reputation as a result of our involvement in the early enrollment program and the introduction of the general education program," attested Joseph P. DiMaria, acting director of RIC's Records Office who was attending the convention. The event was open to all interested participants. Registration is $1, plus $2 for gasoline. For more information call Ext. 8026.