So much art comes out of little Rhody it's difficult to fathom the size of the state as compared to some of our more creative large cities. This Saturday, May 31 at AS220 in Providence, is rocked by The Rhode Show. Using Hip-Hop, Jazz, R&B and Soul, the Rhode Show creates and performs original works of art based on their life experiences, community and their love for creative expression. This performance art is about connecting its audience to an appreciation of all cultures, with the hopes of promoting diversity and critical thought. The Rhode Show's ultimate goal is to use their music and creative process to empower, engage, and educate today's youth. Again, The Rhode Show on May 31, at 8pm, AS220. Admission is $5.

Weekend: Hear Rhode Show, Lennon tributes

Rhode Show, the youth hip-hop group that's an outgrowth of the Broad Street Studio at AS220, finally cut a CD, and projo.com has put half of it online as mp3s at projo.com/music.

Also there, you'll find links to samples from Instant Karma: The Campaign To Save Darfur, a 23-track double CD on which musicians such as U2, Green Day, Willie Nelson, REM, The Deftones, Barenaked Ladies and many, many more cover John Lennon tunes.

Listen, then chime in on our survey on our music page: In these tributes, "Who honors Lennon and who doesn't?"
