What's News At Rhode Island College

Rhode Island College

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.ric.edu/whats_news

Recommended Citation

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Newspapers at Digital Commons @ RIC. It has been accepted for inclusion in What's News? by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ RIC. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@ric.edu.
47 students named Who's Who

The 1989 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges will include the names of 47 students from Rhode Island College who have been selected as "national outstanding campus leaders," according to the annual directory. Campus nominating committees and editors of the directory have included the names of these students based on their academic achievements, community service, and leadership in extracurricular activities as a potential for continued success.

They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,400 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations," say director editors.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934. Students named this year from Rhode Island College and their hometowns are:

- Rick

(continued on page 6)

Winter Commencement Jan. 29

Honorary degrees will be given to three individuals who have distinguished themselves in their respective fields including: Martin Haberman, professor of education at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and a noted scholar, educator, and public policy maker. Haberman, who will deliver the commencement address, is being awarded an honorary doctorate of education degree.

In addition to his teaching responsibilities, Haberman serves on eight editorial boards, and as an external evaluator on tenure decisions at 12 universities and consultant on teacher education to 16 others. Highly respected in the field of education, he has played a significant role in shaping every major development in American teacher education during the past 30 years. Haberman's current research is focused on preparing teachers of today to be more effective in their teaching methods to schoolchildren in a multicultural society.

To the traditional sound of Pomp and Circumstance, nearly 325 Rhode Island College students will join the ranks of close to 27,000 alumni of the College during winter commencement ceremonies scheduled for Sunday, Jan. 29 at 2 p.m. in Roberts Auditorium.

Among this 1989 class, about 250 students will receive their bachelor's degrees, with master's degrees being awarded to 70 graduate students. All of the degrees will be conferred by President Carol J. Guardo, who will offer greetings to the graduates and their guests along with Gov. Edward D. DiPrete, and Albert E. Carfitt, chairman of the Board of Governors for Higher Education.

(continued on page 6)

If talent, education and hard work can do it, Sarix will succeed

by George LaFleur

A petite young Brit, who now lives in Providence and attends Rhode Island College full-time as an art student, characterizes her fashion designs as "high style but fun and affordable."

Using much of what she has learned here, Sarah Rick, who has established Sarix International Designs and set up a "very low-key" retail/wholesale outlet for her creations at a trendy site on Wickenden Street in Providence's East Side.

A sophomore with transfer credits from University of Texas at Austin where she met Rick, Sarah hasn't yet decided on a specific area of concentration within her art major, but she has already amply demonstrated talent in a number of areas.

With an artist's eye, she goes shopping for raw materials (which might include various metals usually not of the precious variety—rubber, stone, plastics, wood, fur and cloth) and turns them into "high fashion fun wear!"

Such items as "individually designed" (and, hence, unique) earrings, pins and clothing are made on site. In the clothing category, Sara designs such things as mini-skirts which might feature artistic patterns and fur lamé, and then produced in quantity for wholesale distribution as well as retail sale in their showroom/store.

(continued on page 6)

CUMMINGS

Rhode Island resident, Richard Cummings, who has played an integral part of the success of Providence's Trinity Repertory Company and is recognized worldwide for his award winning musical scores, will receive an honorary doctorate of music. A friend of the Rhode Island College community, Cummings has enriched the lives of many here, through his scores for theatre productions, a commissioned work for the Chamber Singers, and many other musical contributions.

His work has been performed by such prestigious organizations such as the Florida Symphony, the Nashville Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the San Francisco Symphony, the Academy Festival Theater in Lake Forest, Illinois, and the Central City Opera. He has also held appointments as composer-in-residence for several groups and universities and has composed numbers for chamber groups, choirs and orchestras, operas and television and radio.

A third honorary doctorate degree in public service will be awarded to Wilma Pearl Mankiller, the first woman ever to serve as chief of a major American Indian tribe. Her official title is Chief Wilma Mankiller, Principal Chief of the Cherokee Nation.

A recipient of many awards, including the Ortho 20th Century Woman Award and the Ms. Magazine Woman of the Year award, Mankiller's efforts fighting against the Indian nation has helped improve the quality of life for Native Americans and has focused worldwide attention on her personal philosophy of self-reliance and community development.

She is a tireless worker and advocate for the Cherokee people and held several posts with the Cherokee Nation of Oklahoma prior to her election as Principal Chief.

Welcoming remarks will be offered by

HABERMAN

(continued on page 6)

MANKILLER

Crist H. Costa, chair of the Council of Rhode Island College. Invocation will be done by College Chaplain Sister Mary Ann Rossi, C.N.D.

Following the presentations of degrees and closing remarks, the ceremony will end as an expected 1,200 guests watch as their special graduate exits Roberts Auditorium to the recessional song of Second Suite in F. From the Savoy Hotel, dance and special events, said that all graduates, their families and friends have been invited to a reception in Donovas Dining Center in honor of the students.

Wrestlers ranked nationally for the first time

by Dave Kemmy

Sports Information Director

The Anchormen wrestling program received yet another honor recently when the National Division III Coaches Association announced the results of the latest national poll.

The Anchormen found themselves ranked 19th in that poll, marking the first time in school history that the program has been ranked among the nation's elite. The ranking comes after many years of hard work and dedication by coaches Rusty Carlson and Tim Cloose. The team captured their first New England College Conference Champions last season and are well on their way to becoming a prominent team nationally.

The team is made up primarily of Rhode Island schoolboy products, which also says a lot about the high school wrestling programs in the state. Of the team's ten starters, eight hail from Rhode Island schools. The program has also had two All-Americans, Scott Martin from Cranston last season and Jim Souza from Warwick in 1980.

Martin has an opportunity to become the first two-time All-American and has a strong shot at becoming the first National Champion from Rhode Island ever.

Other Anchormen who have excelled so far this year include 226 pound sophomore Brian Allen from Piscoung, 134 pound junior Joe Amato from East Greenwich, 142 pound senior Kevin Higgins from Plymouth, Conn. and 288 pound freshman Scott Carlson from Cranston, head coach Rusty Carlson's son.

The team has posted a 2-1 dual meet record to date and have placed very well in a couple of tournaments. In early January they took second in the Hunter College Tournament in New York City. With continued hard work they should be in serious contention for a second New England title.
C. Sousa named editorial assistant in news and publications services

Cynthia L. Sousa of Warren has been named editorial assistant in the Rhode Island College Office of News and Publications Services, it was announced by Clare Flynn Joy, assistant director of communications/news.

Her appointment became effective Jan. 15.

Sousa, a 1981 graduate of the University of Rhode Island with a major in journalism, had been employed by the college in a part-time position on a temporary basis for two years while the office was undergoing a reorganization.

Previously, Sousa had been employed by Typsetting Service Corp. of Providence. In addition to her formal training in journalism, Sousa has extensive training and experience in master typewriting and various other aspects of publications production.

"We feel very fortunate to have had the services of Ms. Sousa during the reorganization period and look to her continued contribution as a permanent part of our staff," says Joy.

As editorial assistant, she will work under the supervision of Joy and Raymond J. Ragosta, assistant director of communications/obituary.

Sousa's duties will include gathering and writing information for both the news and publications functions of the College which also participated on a panel discussion of "Evaluation and Politics in the Management Process." Her article, "Evaluating an Old Friend," one evaluator's view of the changing role of program evaluation, was printed in the summer issue of Evaluation Practice. Drs. Ultsa and L. Adile Bide, both associate professors of management, recently participated in the annual national conference of Human Resources Management and Organizational Behavior in Long Beach, Calif., where they presented a paper jointly on "Japan in America. The Rustic Creek Experience." A recent article by them entitled "Human Resources Management Practices in Japanese Organizations in the United States" has been published in Public Personnel Management.

Dr. Lawrence Boush, professor of communications, and Dr. E. Pierre Murenver, director of the college's Public Archaeology Program, recently produced a comprehensive document entitled "Beautiful Harvest Concerning archaeological work in Rhode Island which will be screened at the annual archaeological Congress in Baltimore, Md., this month.

Prof. Samuel B. Ames, Laurie E. Sloan and Donald C. Smith, who make up the painting and printmaking area in the college's Visual Arts Program, had 27 of their recent paintings, prints and engravings exhibited at Gallery 410 at the Jewish Community Center in Providence.

Elizabeth A. Moroney, a ten-year veteran of the Rhode Island House of Representations, who star in the college's Visual Arts Program, was the subject of a panel discussion for the state's lieutenant governor position during last year's election, will join the faculty of the School of Arts and Sciences this semester at the college. A teacher by profession, a politician by nature, and a humanitarian by heart, Moroney said she will miss working for her constituency from the Elmwood Section of Providence as their representative, but welcomes the opportunity to "enlighten the academe of visual and lifework experiences" by teaching the Sociology of Work under the college's Labor Studies program. Besides teaching the course at RIC, Moroney has recently accepted a position with the City of Providence Planning and Development Housing. For further information about the labor studies course, contact Dan Weisman, Coordinator, Labor Studies Program, at 456-8681.

March 1st is deadline for FAFs

Financial Aid Forms for the 1989-90 academic year are now available in the Office of Financial Aid and Student Employment Services, Craig Lee Office, at 456-8681. March 1st is the deadline for receipt of these forms. Any form submitted after March 1st, will be considered late and is subject to special circumstances, according to William H. Hurry, Jr., director, Deadlines for receipt of this form in Princeton, NJ, is March 1. Hurry urges applicants "not to delay, pick up your form today."
College votes to establish athletic Hall of Fame

"The varsity athletic program at Rhode Island College has reached a point in time where it is old enough to have a substantial pool of very worthwhile candidates for recognition in a Hall of Fame. "

"Yes, the program is young enough to have not only written records, but people who can recall first-hand experience with potential candidates. "

"As this latter claim may no longer be valid in the near future, the time for the establishment of a Hall of Fame that will be a first-rate and meaningful program is at hand." -William Baird

That being said and generally agreed upon, the College’s Committee on Athletics, Intramurals and Recreation has voted unanimously in favor of a Hall of Fame honoring graduates whose participation in intercollegiate athletics was "truly outstanding" and others who provided service and support that "greatly exceeded normal expectations and resulted in significant enhancement of the fame and/or tradition of the College athletics program." The timeliness calls for the establishment of the Hall of Fame during the current academic year with the first induction of honorees set for next October.

A recommendation to establish a Hall of Fame was made by William M. Baird, director of athletics here, in the spring semester of the 1985-86 year. Baird, a former star athlete and later basketball coach and administrator of athletics at the University of Rhode Island, is a member of the URI Athletic Hall of Fame.

Those honored by selection to the Hall of Fame will receive a framed citation and bronze medallion and have his or her name inscribed on a permanent Rhode Island College Hall of Fame plaque to be mounted in the foyer of the Walsh Health and Physical Education Center. These awards will be presented at a Hall of Fame dinner in October to be arranged by the athletic department.

The Hall of Fame dinner will be administered jointly by the Athletic Intramurals and Recreation Policy Committee and a Hall of Fame Committee comprised of six members. The athletic director will serve as an ex officio member. Recommendations for membership on the Hall of Fame Committee will come from the athletic department. Committee nominations will be forwarded to the vice president for student affairs for action.

Pres. Guardo’s contract renewed for 3 more years

Carol J. Guardo’s contract as president of Rhode Island College was renewed for three more years by the Board of Governors of Higher Education last month. The board voted unanimously in closed session to renew the contract which expires July 1, after an extensive evaluation that included interviews with faculty, staff, administrators and students.

"All the constituencies are involved," board chairman Albert E. Carldorff said.

"The board was pleased with Guardo’s progress." He noted the College’s increased enrollment, stronger admission policies and substantial increase in grants over the past three years.

After learning that her contract had been renewed, Guardo said, "It’s always encouraging to have the support to continue with the kinds of initiatives you’ve already taken." Guardo, the first woman to head a public Rhode Island college, was inaugurated as Rhode Island College’s seventh president in the fall of 1986.
In Memoriam

'Terry Lynch was quick to smile; he could raise your spirits'

Bookstore manager dead at 57
by George LaTour

Manager of the Campus Store (bookstore) at Rhode Island College for nearly 20 years, Jerome B. "Jerry" Lynch, died unexpectedly at age 57 on Monday, Dec. 12, at Roger Williams General Hospital after being stricken at a friend's home. Highly respected and well liked, his death came as a shock to the College community where he had been very active, actually working with his assistant, Steven Platt, on the book audit for next semester until 7:30 the night he died.

"He was reportedly in very good spirits at work that night. After he left the Campus Store, he stopped by to see a friend's Christmas tree and while there was stricken," according to Bruce R. Allen, director of the Campus Center and personal friend.

"Jerry had been feeling good about himself of late," reported Allen, explaining that he had recently lost some weight and had cut down on his smoking.

"He was pensive, always quick to smile; quick witted—the type of person you would like to run into, especially if you were having a bad day. He could raise your spirits," quoted Allen.

At the request of the Lynch family, a memorial service will be held on March 6 at the Faculty Center. Further details will appear in the Briefs.

Lynch was the recipient of an honorary degree in 1983 at the University of Connecticut. He is survived by three sons, Jerome B. Lynch II of West Warwick, Kyle E. and Craig R. Lynch, both of Saugus, Mass.; a brother, C. A. Peter Lynch of Bristol; a sister, Patricia A. Lillis of Arlington, Mass.; and a granddaughter.

Orientation for returning adult students to be held Feb. 1st
by Cynthia L. Sousa

The Office of Academic Affairs and Slightly Older Students (SOS) will sponsor an orientation for returning adult students, according to Pennie Shaw, coordinator of SOS. The session will be held Wednesday, Feb. 1 from 12:30 to 2 p.m. in the Faculty Center South.

The orientation will include information on services, programs, and facilities, such as Career Services, the Women's Center, research aids in the library, campus dining services, registration and class scheduling tips.

This program is designed to supplement the academic orientations by providing older, non-traditional students with additional information and assistance specific to their needs.

Budgeting time for family, work, and school will be discussed as well as what it is like to return to the classroom after a long time absence.

Current adult students and other staff members from a variety of offices and departments will be attending. Refreshments will be provided.

Shaw urges those planning to attend to make reservations by Jan. 25 by calling 456-8901, 456-8744 or 456-8388.

Marra, Class of '80, named alumni association president

Michael K. Marran of Warwick, an attorney associated with the law firm of St. Germain, Rodio & Ursillo of Providence, has been elected to a two-year term as president of the Rhode Island College Alumni Association.

Others elected are Eric Crowley of Cranston, Class of 1982, vice president; Patricia Machel of Providence, Class of 1960, treasurer; and Howard Boyajian, Class of 1965, secretary.

A 1980 graduate of the College, Marran had majored in political science and served as president of the Student Community Government. He completed his law degree in 1983 at the University of Connecticut School of Law.

Prior to his current law firm affiliation, he was with the Providence firm of Abedon, Michaelson, Stanfield & Bienen.

Health, human service providers to discuss helping children in need in Rhode Island

Will hear businessman who promised 61 Harlem kids college scholarships

More than 700 health and human service providers have been invited to attend a lecture and discussion at Rhode Island College on Tuesday, Jan. 31, from 3 to 4:30 p.m. in Galge Hall on how they can get more involved in projects that help children in need.

Entitled "Let's Invest in the Future Together," the guest speaker will be Eugene M. Lang, the corporate leader, entrepreneur and philanthropist whose promise to fund the higher education of 61 Harlem kids drew him national attention and resulted in the founding of his "I Have a Dream" Foundation.

Lang was the recipient of an honorary degree by Rhode Island College last January. Moderator for the event—which is being sponsored by the College and the United Way of Southeastern New England—will be Edward W. Collins, M.D., children's policy coordinator for the state of Rhode Island.

Dr. Carol J. Guardo, president, is expected to bring the official welcome of the College to the health and human service professionals attending. Members of the College community are also invited to attend.

"The problems young people face in Rhode Island mirror problems faced throughout our country," she said.

"Of all six-year-old children in our state—those who will graduate from high school in the year 2000—one in four is poor. One out of five will become a teen parent. One in six lacks health insurance. One in three may drop out of school.

"These facts, among others, reflect deep crises in our social fabric and for economic prosperity," according to W. Eugene Lang

Beyond The Dream
A CELEBRATION OF BLACK HISTORY

Live via satellite from Washington, D.C., a two-hour, interactive telecommunications program.

Date: Wednesday, February 1, 1989
Time: 1:00 to 3:00 p.m.
Place: Student Union Ballroom

Beyond the Dream presents a mosaic of the past, present, and future of black participation in American society and culture. The format will combine narrated film footage by leading American citizens, revealing observations by prominent celebrities and live interactive discussions with distinguished experts, including John Hope Franklin, Mary Hatford Funke, and Ava Hilliard. Featuring the means or the encouragement to seek a college education.

Beyond the Dream: A Celebration of Black History is intended to be just that, a celebration. The audience will find that the underlying theme of the program is one of an uplifting and Rhode Island College present...
Inventor and business pro will direct $3 million Center for industrial tech at Rhode Island College

Just as Nathan L. Church, metallurgist, did when he discovered, invented and patented new forms of alloy by fusing together metals, this creative administrator plans to do as director of the Center for Industrial Technology at Rhode Island College.

When he takes charge there Jan. 30 and begins to mix the resources of the new center together with the needs of the state's manufacturing community to define and discover unique properties of both he will do so in an effort to bolster Rhode Island's ability to produce, market, and sell sophisticated new products.

The first step the 48-year-old Lincoln resident said he would take as he crosses the threshold of Rhode Island College's new $3 million center will be for each administrative officer is to "get together with the people involved—tell them about myself and listen to their impressions of what needs to be done in order for us to provide that direct link between the center and the Rhode Island business community."

"If they think Church intends to do what he does best, "lead, direct, and turn a place over,"

According to a colleague who has known him for more than 10 years as a co-worker and boss, "nobody could do it better."

"I couldn't think of anyone better qualified or with the unusual combination of experiences and background who could bet­ter identify what the school offers, what the businesses need, and mix it together," said Archie Epstein, director of engineering for Technical Materials Inc. in Lincoln, where Church recently left as vice president and general manager.

"I am pleased to see the match," Epstein continued, "and look forward to possibly continuing our relationship" by using the center's resources.

Church's enthusiasm for this new challenge of developing the Center into a business research facility is seen in his clear eyes and head in straightforward talk as he discussed his new job.

"The Rhode Island College represents an important resource to the commercial sector of the state," he said. "People who are being highlighted by the development and functions of this center, the commitment from the college administration for its success and the involvement of the Industrial Technology faculty and staff."

With 28 years of technical and admin­istrative experience behind him, including an M.B.A. in general management from Case Western Reserve University and a Ph.D. in metallurgy from Case Institute of Technolo­gy, Church feels very comfortable in his new position.

"I'm very excited," Church said. "Rhode Island College needs this."

With the kind of curriculum that has already begun, which enables graduates of their programs to make an immediate impact in the quality control aspect of their work," Church explained, "the center is a necessary part of the overall welfare of the state's business climate."

Church was born in New Jersey and brought up in upstate New York on the Hudson River. His professional life, span­ning from 1961 when he graduated with a bachelor of metallurgy education from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute through this year has included researching, develop­ing, and patenting eight United States pro­ducts and three Canadian products. He describes himself as a "leader, builder, mentor, inventor, and recruiter."

Chair of the Industrial Technology Depart­ment Kenneth A. McVay describes him as a "true man."

He stood out because he had the industry side and the educational knowledge to make this center a success," McVay said. "His primary job will be to make the general man­ufacturing public aware that we exist and to do this within the college's structure—to put them together."

William F. Kennaway, associate professor in Industrial Technology, who along with McVay and three other search committee members, began the quest for a director last October, said 21 candidates applied for the position in a nationwide search. The center under the direction of its new chief, will open this semester.

---

 Childhood sex abuse is topic here Jan. 23

Laura Davis, a noted author, lecturer, and trainer on child­hood sexual abuse, will pres­ent a public lect­ure on Mon­day, Jan. 23, at Rhode Island College's Robert­son Hall audi­to­rium at 7 p.m.

Laura Davis, a noted author, lecturer, and trainer on child­hood sexual abuse, will pres­ent a public lect­ure on Mon­day, Jan. 23, at Rhode Island College's Robert­son Hall audi­to­rium at 7 p.m.

 Major Karl Peterson to head ROTC program here

Major Karl L. Peterson of Somer­set, Mass., an assistant professor of military sci­ence at Providence College, has been named officer-in-charge of the Rhode Island College Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) program for a two-year tour of duty, effective Dec. 23.

Peterson replaces Maj. Russell A. Grimm of Cranston. Originally from New York City, Peterson has a bachelor's degree in English from Bridgewater State College and a master's in English education from this College.

He attended the U.S. Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga., where he completed the basic airborne course and the infantry officer basic and advanced courses with Special Forces qualification at Ft. Bragg, N.C. Other military training includes that of nu­clear, biological and chemical warfare at Ft. Devens, Mass., and a unit managers course at Ft. McCoy, Wis.

Prior to his assignment to PC in May 1987, he served as a field operations officer at the 94th ARCOM Headquarters, Strength Management Office, at Hanscom Airforce Base in Lexington, Mass.

Former civilian positions include that of U.S. treasury agent with the Bureau of Customs and a teacher of English at the Diman Regional Vocational High School in Fall River.

His wife, Martha, is a nursing instructor at Bristol Plymouth High School. They have three daughters.

Currently, there are some 40 students enrolled in the College's military science courses.
If talent, education and hard work can do it, Sarix will succeed

(continued from page 1)

NEW WAVE ARTIST at her downtown studio on Providence's Wicklend Street in South Providence, a native of London, England, who now attends Rhode Island Colleage as an art student. (What's New Photos by Gordon E. Rowley)

"Nothing (other than the T-shirts) is mass produced," assures Rick, who handles most of the business aspects of the fledgling enterprise.

"All the art work is original," he said with an appreciative nod toward Sarah as the couple sat in their second floor, sparsely but immaculately clean, (and somewhat drably) showroom a couple of weeks ago.

Despite a wind-chill factor approaching 20 degrees below zero outside, customers, colleagues and friends continuously trodged up the stairs to browse, buy or banter with the Rondeaus, who give every indication of being artists with their (fashionably "moussed" in Sarah's case).

They are also thinking of opening up stores in England and on the Contides for, he says "I'm looking at a very attractive company with the most pass drug tests

Who's Who

(continued from page 1)

Cristen
Michele L. Bastien, David S. Cheney, K
Kristy L. Davis and Meghan M. Diaz-Pinto.
Warwick
Sally A. Allen and Scott J. Previty.
Johnston
Kimberly A. Barber, Davis M. DelPont
and Robin L.A. Williams.
Pawtucket
Mary E. Crane-Couzens and Alfred
todesco III.
North Smithfield
Jacqueline J. Cardillo and Kurt D.
Gabrielson.
Smithfield
Central Falls
Theresa M.R. Ducharme and Jacqueline
Margaret P. M. Lincoln.
Woonsocket
Alysa B. DeAndrade and Cynthia J.
Wrightman.
North Providence
Denise M. DiMarzio and Renee M.
Reault.
West Warwick
Gary MacDonnell.
Covington
James Kuijpers and Robert J. Sebastienel-
Warren
Bethany L. Goldberg, Jeanne M. Shears
and Paul F. Stabile.

Brown University's Institute

Workers for the future

AND, we're impatient," assures Sarah with an impish giggle.

Job market booming for '89 grads

His report closely followed an early Dec-em要素s in job market for this spring's

"Engineering, accounting and health professionals are most sought-after graduates," said Dellow, while Lim-Benton job offers is a source of pride this year,

day and said they were especially interest-in hiring more women and minority groups. Some students consequently feel they're in the driver's seat.

"I'm looking for an attractive company with the most us, said University of Maryland senior Maurice Botsiere of his job search. "Right now I'm looking at company profiles. I'm comparing them..."

The companies feel it, too.

"We will be offering jobs to people who know they are going to be in great demand," conceded Sally Odle, recruiting manager for IBM. "We have to offer jobs that are challenging and interesting."

Deborah Dellow of Eastern Western University's placement office also found

"there's more competition (for students), so companies are getting more aggressive. They're buying ads in student publications and coming to the office to strategize more with the (placement) director."

Observers attribute the scramble for students to corporate perceptions that there won't be enough grads to hire in the future.

A recent U.S. Department of Labor study predicted one million fewer young people will enter the job market during the next decade than during the 1970s.

"We are doing everything we can to prepare the students for the labor market," said Trudy Marotta of the MarriottCorp.

"We are doing everything we can to prepare the students for the labor market," said Trudy Marotta of the MarriottCorp.

"Corporate America is very confident the economy will remain strong despite concerns by Federal Reserve officials that the volume of the job market, the deficit, trade balance, megamergers and the increased competition in the marketplace," Lindquist said.

Star's who's who (continued from page 1)

Cristen
Michele L. Bastien, David S. Cheney,
Kirsty L. Davis and Meghan M. Diaz-Pinto.
Warwick
Sally A. Allen and Scott J. Previty.
Johnston
Kimberly A. Barber, Davis M. DelPont
and Robin L.A. Williams.
Pawtucket
Mary E. Crane-Couzens and Alfred
todesco III.
North Smithfield
Jacqueline J. Cardillo and Kurt D.
Gabirolson.
Smithfield
Central Falls
Theresa M.R. Ducharme and Jacqueline
Margaret P. M. Lincoln.
Woonsocket
Alysa B. DeAndrade and Cynthia J.
Wrightman.
North Providence
Denise M. DiMarzio and Renee M.
Reault.
West Warwick
Gary MacDonnell.
Covington
James Kuijpers and Robert J. Sebastienel-
Warren
Bethany L. Goldberg, Jeanne M. Shears
and Paul F. Stabile.

More students will have to pass drug tests

"The drug user, once on the payroll, becomes a very, very costly liability," the employer, explained Victor Lindquist, author of Northwestern University's Lindquist-Endicott Report, which showed 47 percent of the companies hiring on the job market for this year's test job applicants for drug use.

Another seven percent of the employers Lindquist surveyed said they expected to start drug testing during 1989.

Despite predictions of the companies asked by Michigan State University's Annual Re-

cruting Survey, also released in late December, that many prospective employers will take

drug tests.

Sixty-four percent of the companies contacted by Michigan State, however, said they had no plans to implement drug testing in the near future.

"There's no question about it," reported Angie Aschoff of Linn-Benton Community

College's placement office in Oregon, "the number of jobs advertised with us is up this year."

It's happening nationwide. Two major annual surveys, released in December, of national corporate plans for new jobs both predicted a happy spring.

Northwestern University's Lindquist-

Endicott Report found an eight percent jump in corporate demand for graduates with bachelor's degrees. Those graduates will receive starting salaries that are an average 4.6 percent higher than those garnered by the class of '88.

Starting salaries for students with new master's degrees should be 3.3 percent higher than last year's, NU's report added.

While Michigan State University's Annual Recruiting Survey does not paint as rosy a picture, it does predict "new graduates will face a healthy job market."

MSU asked 427 corporations about their hiring plans. In response, the firms expected to make 3.1 percent more hires than those they employed a year ago.

More students will have to pass drug tests—this time a drug test—before starting their careers after graduation, new studies of the job market for this spring's graduates indicate.

"Job market booming for '89 grads

"The drug user, once on the payroll, becomes a very, very costly liability," the employer, explained Victor Lindquist, author of Northwestern University's Lindquist-Endicott Report, which showed 47 percent of the companies hiring on the job market for this year's test job applicants for drug use.

Another seven percent of the employers Lindquist surveyed said they expected to start
drug testing during 1989.

Despite predictions of the companies asked by Michigan State University's Annual Re-

cruting Survey, also released in late December, that many prospective employers will take

drug tests.

Sixty-four percent of the companies contacted by Michigan State, however, said they had no plans to implement drug testing in the near future.

"There's no question about it," reported Angie Aschoff of Linn-Benton Community

College's placement office in Oregon, "the number of jobs advertised with us is up this year."

It's happening nationwide. Two major annual surveys, released in December, of national corporate plans for new jobs both predicted a happy spring.

Northwestern University's Lindquist-

Endicott Report found an eight percent jump in corporate demand for graduates with bachelor's degrees. Those graduates will receive starting salaries that are an average 4.6 percent higher than those garnered by the class of '88.

Starting salaries for students with new master's degrees should be 3.3 percent higher than last year's, NU's report added.

While Michigan State University's Annual Recruiting Survey does not paint as rosy a picture, it does predict "new graduates will face a healthy job market."

MSU asked 427 corporations about their hiring plans. In response, the firms expected to make 3.1 percent more hires than those they employed a year ago.

More students will have to pass drug tests—this time a drug test—before starting their careers after graduation, new studies of the job market for this spring's graduates indicate.

"The drug user, once on the payroll, becomes a very, very costly liability," the employer, explained Victor Lindquist, author of Northwestern University's Lindquist-Endicott Report, which showed 47 percent of the companies hiring on the job market for this year's test job applicants for drug use.

Another seven percent of the employers Lindquist surveyed said they expected to start
drug testing during 1989.

Despite predictions of the companies asked by Michigan State University's Annual Re-

cruting Survey, also released in late December, that many prospective employers will take

drug tests.

Sixty-four percent of the companies contacted by Michigan State, however, said they had no plans to implement drug testing in the near future.

"There's no question about it," reported Angie Aschoff of Linn-Benton Community

College's placement office in Oregon, "the number of jobs advertised with us is up this year."

It's happening nationwide. Two major annual surveys, released in December, of national corporate plans for new jobs both predicted a happy spring.

Northwestern University's Lindquist-

Endicott Report found an eight percent jump in corporate demand for graduates with bachelor's degrees. Those graduates will receive starting salaries that are an average 4.6 percent higher than those garnered by the class of '88.

Starting salaries for students with new master's degrees should be 3.3 percent higher than last year's, NU's report added.

While Michigan State University's Annual Recruiting Survey does not paint as rosy a picture, it does predict "new graduates will face a healthy job market."

MSU asked 427 corporations about their hiring plans. In response, the firms expected to make 3.1 percent more hires than those they employed a year ago.

More students will have to pass drug tests—this time a drug test—before starting their careers after graduation, new studies of the job market for this spring's graduates indicate.

"The drug user, once on the payroll, becomes a very, very costly liability," the employer, explained Victor Lindquist, author of Northwestern University's Lindquist-Endicott Report, which showed 47 percent of the companies hiring on the job market for this year's test job applicants for drug use.

Another seven percent of the employers Lindquist surveyed said they expected to start
drug testing during 1989.

Despite predictions of the companies asked by Michigan State University's Annual Re-

cruting Survey, also released in late December, that many prospective employers will take

drug tests.

Sixty-four percent of the companies con-

}
Hoop star scores 1,000 points so far

JESSE FERRELL

Ferrell reaches 1,000 point plateau

Senior men's basketball forward Jesse Ferrell from Providence became the 25th player overall and the 20th male to reach the 1,000 point mark for his career. He reached that milestone on the team's recent trip to California. He needed just six points in the team's game against the University of La Verne to reach the mark. He presently has 1,055 points, which places him 25th on the list and he could climb as high as 15th if he continues at his current pace.

The Anchormen went 1-2 on the trip, defeating La Verne 84-67, but losing to Pomona-Pitzer 96-74 and Claremont-Mudd-Scripps College 89-69. Ferrell was the top scorer in the La Verne game with 22.0 points per game and in the top scorer in the La Verne game with 14 points.

The team topped the University of La Verne 65-54 with Doreen Grasso leading the way with 19 points. They also defeated the University of Redlands 64-61 with Grasso putting on quite a show. The talented senior guard scored a career-high 30 points, including three three-pointers. The team lost their final game on the trip, bowing 82-70 to the California State University at San Bernardino squad. Grasso was the team's top scorer once again with 21 points.

The team is presently in third place in the Little East with a 2-1 record. They also have several key games coming up. Tuesday, Jan. 24 they host Southeastern Massachusetts University, the second place team in Walsh Gym. Saturday, Jan. 28 they play Plymouth State, the fifth place team and Sunday, Jan. 29 they tangle with the University of Southern Maine who is presently undefeated and in first place in the conference.

Grasso is the team's top scorer. She is averaging 20.9 points per game. Debbie Allen is the next top scorer at 7.8 per game. Susan Head is the top rebounder with 5.6 a game. Lisa Sweet is next at 4.5.

Women's gymnastics

The women's gymnastics team has an 0.1 record as they head into second semester action. Saturday, Jan. 21 the team travels to Salem, Massachusetts for a meet with Salem State College who defeated the Anchormen 227.6 to 105.9 back on Dec. 14. Sophomore Ellen D'Allesio was the team's top producer in that meet with an all around score of 28.95. The team's next home meet is Wednesday, Jan. 25 against the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at 7:30 p.m. in Walsh Gymnasium.

Keeping Score

with Dave Kemmy

Hoop star scores 1,000 points so far

Smith has also had a great start. The 6'6" junior forward leads the team in scoring with 22.0 points per game and in rebounding with 13.0 a game. He is ranked nationally in both categories as well. He is third in the country with his rebounding average. Senior guard Ron Campbell has also done well in the assist department. He is averaging eight per game, leading the Little East Conference by a wide margin. Smith is also the top rebounder in the conference.

Coming up, the Anchormen have three very important Little East games. Tuesday, Jan. 24 they host defending champions Southeastern Massachusetts and Saturday, Jan. 28 they travel to Plymouth State seeking revenge against the Panthers. The following day, Sunday, Jan. 29 they tangle with the University of Southern Maine, the current leader in the league with just one loss, that coming at the hands of the Anchormen back on Dec. 3.

The team had a 6-6 record after topping Western New England College 93-65 on Jan. 15. They are 1-2 in the Little East.

Women's basketball

The women's basketball team is also 6-6 on the year, having posted a 2-1 record in California.

The team topped the University of La Verne 63-54 with Doreen Grasso leading the way with 19 points. They also defeated the University of Redlands 64-61 with Grasso putting on quite a show. The talented senior guard scored a career-high 30 points, including three three-pointers. The team lost their final game on the trip, bowing 82-70 to the California State University at San Bernardino squad. Grasso was the team's top scorer once again with 21 points.

The team is presently in third place in the Little East with a 2-1 record. They also have several key games coming up. Tuesday, Jan. 24 they host Southeastern Massachusetts University, the second place team in Walsh Gym. Saturday, Jan. 28 they play Plymouth State, the fifth place team and Sunday, Jan. 29 they tangle with the University of Southern Maine who is presently undefeated and in first place in the conference.

Grasso is the team's top scorer. She is averaging 20.9 points per game. Debbie Allen is the next top scorer at 7.8 per game. Susan Head is the top rebounder with 5.6 a game. Lisa Sweet is next at 4.5.

Women's gymnastics

The women's gymnastics team has an 0.1 record as they head into second semester action. Saturday, Jan. 21 the team travels to Salem, Massachusetts for a meet with Salem State College who defeated the Anchormen 227.6 to 105.9 back on Dec. 14. Sophomore Ellen D'Allesio was the team's top producer in that meet with an all around score of 28.95. The team's next home meet is Wednesday, Jan. 25 against the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at 7:30 p.m. in Walsh Gymnasium.

Chess Team ties for 2nd in Pan-American Intercollegiate Championship

Rhode Island College Chess Team went undefeated in the Pan-American Intercollegiate Team Chess Championship Dec. 26-30 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in New Brunswick, N.J., but two ties (with Harvard and Yale) left it sharing second place with Yale and the University of California at Berkeley.

Harvard University, which also went undefeated, took first place in the tournament which determines the collegiate chess team champions in this hemisphere.

Teams from colleges and universities in the United States, Canada and Latin America participate. RIC won the championship in 1985 and, as winners, hosted the 1986 championship in Providence, defeating Patrick Wolff, the highest-rated player in the tournament, in RIC's match with Yale. Joshua, who plans to graduate next year, will be eligible to play in next year's championship.

Included among the teams RIC beat were Penn State, the University of Toronto and the University of Virginia.

RIC's Sharon Bartman, a junior from Stoughton, Mass., took the prize for the "best record as an alternate" player.

Other RIC team members are James Cornell, a junior from North Providence; Leonard Johnson, a junior from Providence and Keith Kaplan, a senior from Warwick.

Next on the RIC Chess Team's agenda will be the National Amateur Team Championship in February.

Rhode Island College, Brown University and Providence College will be the sites of 12 regional American College Theater Festival (ACTF) Jan. 27-Feb. 2.

The festival will feature five full-length college theater productions—two each here at PC and at Brown. The festival offer a host of workshops led by nationally recognized theater professionals.

A number of the workshops and other festival activities will be held at the Omni Biltmore Hotel in downtown Providence. While Rhode Island College will not offer a theater production in competition this year, four of its students will vie for the prestigious Irene Ryan Acting Scholarship.

They (and their partners) are: Paul Pascale, a junior (Jeremy Baker, a senior); Emillietta Theroux, a graduate student (Marcia Murphy, a senior); Charles Smith; and Susan Iacobellis, who graduated last year.

'The New Pictorialism' at Bannister Feb. 3

"The New Pictorialism" will be the subject of a Rhode Island College Bannister Gallery exhibit March 2-23, starting the second half of the season which will see a total of five exhibits through May 26.

At the turn of the century, "Pictorialism" translated the philosophy of impressionism into the language of the photograph.

"The work of James Weinstein reaffirms this genre in images which are delicate, intimate, evocative and refreshingly sincere in contrast to the high-impact imagery with which we are bombarded daily," according to Dennis O'Malley, gallery publicist.

Weinstein, a Boston resident and graduate of the Massachusetts College of Art, is a member of the board of directors of the New Pictorialist Society.

Exhibit opening will be from 7-9 p.m. on Feb. 3 with a snow date of Feb. 10.

Bannister Gallery, in the College Art Center, is open Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday and Thursday evenings from 6-9.

Other artists and their exhibits slated throughout the semester are: Kathyrn Myres, "Drawings and Paintings," March 2-23; Sam Asnes, "Recent Works," March 30-April 14; Don C. Smith, "Paintings, Drawings and Prints," April 15-May 4, and the graduate and senior shows, furnished works by College degree recipients from May 7-24.

All the exhibits are free and open to the public.

Further details on each of these exhibits will be published in subsequent issues of What's News. For further information on any of the exhibits call O'Malley at 456-9765 or 456-8054.

The winner in each region of the 12 regions of the ACTF across the country receives $1,000 scholarship and a chance to perform in an "Evening of Scenes" during the ACTF national festival at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., in April. There, leading directors, producers, casting agents and writers view the student-actor presentations. Two performers are awarded additional $2,500 scholarships to pay tuition to the college or university of their choice.

Mark Morretin, a theater student here in 1985, was the last Rhode Island College student to win the Ryan Scholarship, according to David H. Burt, associate professor of theater.

Elaine F. Perry, assistant professor of communications and theater here, is in charge of the Irene Ryan Scholarship this year. Perry is vice chair of the ACTF Region 1.

From the regional festivals produced each year, up to seven productions are selected to be part of the non-competitive ACTF national festival at the Kennedy Center. Last year more than 700 productions and 16,000 students participated nationally in the festival which is sponsored by the National Broadcasting Co., the Kennedy Center Corporate Fund, the U.S. Department of Education and the Ryder System.

Productions slated for performance here are William Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors, to be staged in circa Monday, Jan. 30, at 8:30 p.m. in Roberts Hall auditorium by Bridgwater State College, and Rupert Holmes' The Mystery of Edwin Drood on Jan. 31 at 8:30 p.m. in Roberts by the University of Rhode Island.

A student-original play, The Gamemans, will be performed at Brown's Leeds Theatre on Jan. 30 by Middlebury College.

Providence College's Blackfriars Theatre will be the site Jan. 31 of Sophie Treadwell's Mervyns of New England and Seneca's Medea by Bates College on Feb. 1.

Workshops will include two on acting by Richard Thomas, best know for his Emmy Award-winning portrayal of John Boy in "The Waltons."

The public is invited to all festival activities.

Pre-registration for the five-day festival is $25 which includes all productions, workshops, parties, etc. Checks should be made payable to Walter Stump/ACTF and mailed to David Burt at the Rhode Island College Theatre Dept., Providence 02918.

Payment on site is $50 for the full five days or $12 per day. On-site registration will be at Brown's Leeds Theatre lobby on Friday and Saturday; at the Omni Biltmore all subsequent days.

Admission for single performances is $5 with reduced rates for students and senior citizens. Tickets will be available the day of the performance at the local box office or by calling 456-8814.

For further information contact Maltolly King at 885-7261.