discussion of italy under mussolini.

16 dignity of italians was high.

19 had school on africa street in providence where he was a teacher. about 350 children attended.

33 life in hometown; was patriotic sentiment there.

41 visited italy in 1971. found things different. he didn't like it as much as when he lived there.

47 wasn't a bad life under fascist regime.

53 no crime in his neighborhood. police didn't abuse their power. people respected on another.

69 father was tax assessor for government; mother didn't work. he considered himself middle class.

97 frequent travel because of father's position. born in east of italy. account of relatives.

129 came to new jersey because his sister was there. left naples in december 1922. came on advice of university colleague.

158 came as second class passenger. was happy in italy but came to u.s. to better himself.

214 he finds a lot of discrimination here, even now. feels americans don't recognize the contributions of italians who came here. he's always ready to defend his italian heritage and promote his culture--pride in being italian.

14 As soon as he landed, he saw U.S. was better--could see abundance, opportunities.

33 America is free, respect for person. Opportunity is here. People can work and save and better themselves whereas in Italy the same amount of effort doesn't necessarily make your condition better.

44 Documents he brought--passport, military papers. Needed to be in good health, no criminal record.

65 Got job through acquaintance. Worked in Hospital Trust building for 53 years--barber shop. association with professional men.

134 Feels still is much discrimination against Italians.

187 Had aunt who lived on Spruce Street on Federal Hill. Many bankers and doctors in that area. When he came, area was all Italian. He remembers feasts but he feels it's more important to remember the history and culture of Italy than to celebrate the religious feasts.

240 Italians came on their own, not sent out of their homeland. They should be proud of their heritage and of their reasons for coming: to make an honest living.

260 Enjoyed living on Federal Hill because they were his own kind of people, he knew their traditions, they respected him.

279 U.S. gave him opportunity to educate his children, to improve his life. U.S. is the hope for everyone in the world.
